10a. If you answered Other, please explain.

- All of the above options are easy ways for students to easily access drugs. The medicine cabinet is usually the answer for middle school and high school aged students who struggle with taking prescriptive drugs. For college students, going to parties and having roommates on prescription drugs makes them readily available for use as well.
- Depends which drugs. Study pills (someone who isn't me) would get them from a friend. But that same person who isn't me would get drugs like painkillers or barbiturates would get them from a dealer
- Don't do drugs at all!!!!
- Family, friends, never a dealer. There arent many pill dealers around... You're welcome...
- From a friend who is a dealer.
- Fuck blinn
- Honestly who cares if someone chooses to ruin their life. Drugs have been around in some shape form or fashion for most of human history. Losers will get high, that's why they're losers.
- I am sure that it is not impossible for students in the younger generation since they tend to mingle. I go for school and that is it!
- I do not use any drug or any prescription drug that is not for me, and I will never do it
- I do not use drugs period.
- I do not use drugs that are NOT prescribed to me.
- I don't do prescription drugs, I do have family members who do. They are grown adults who get them from the pharmacy and distribute them to others. They also sometimes get them from their friends who get them the same way...which in that case their friend is their "dealer." I'm sure if I wanted to do prescription drugs I could ask and get them from them.
- I don't use any drugs, prescribed or over the counter. I don't smoke anything. My last antibiotics I used was about 9 years ago.
- I don't use drugs of any kind or prescriptions that aren't for me.
- I don't use prescription drugs
- I dont use them
- I have not nor will I ever use prescription drugs that are not prescribed to me.
- I have only done it once and it was from a friend who purchased it from a dealer.
- I used to get vyvanse from friends who sold their extra's at the end of the month. cheaper to get it that way than it is to get it from a doctor if you do not have insurance. if you don't have insurance they are about 7 bucks a pill, if you get it from the streets it is about 4 bucks a pill because the people who normally sell theirs had insurance
- Kevin Todd Davis -survey participant
- Marijuana, hash, and synthetic marijuana should be separated for the survey. Each has a different level of risk when used.
- The fuck kind of survey is this?
- This really upsets me because I have actual conditions that require certain medical prescriptions, that others use as habitual drugs that I need. Doctors will not prescribe them to me when I need them because they are habit forming. I personally have never been addicted to anything and I have tried everything. I really need some prescriptions but I refuse to buy them off the street. I am in continuous pain.
- Yall Really need to pick it up on the drug issue around campus its getting horrible.
- friends gave them to me because they weren't going to take them.
- i would never use prescription drugs that are not prescribed to be but sadly they are very easy to get
- n/a
- some of my parents prescription pain pills

9a. Why or why not?

- There is a reason alcohol is not sold to anyone under the age of 21, it's a maturity issue. Those who consume alcohol under the age of 21 are more likely to drink and drive, injure themselves or others, engage in risky sexual behavior, contract and spread STD's, and are at a much higher risk of alcoholism and drug abuse. Alcohol is a drug in itself and anyone who is buying alcohol for minors is no better than a drug dealer peddling drugs to kids. I don't drink alcohol but I used to and its affects had major consequences in my life.
- 1) it's illegal
2) I don't think alcohol is needed to be able to enjoy oneself, and as a someone over 21 if I were to provide alcohol to minors I think it models that you think it IS necessary to have alcohol to have fun.
3) there are so many mental and health benefits to not drinking, and especially not too much that I wont ever help someone obtain alcohol even if they are over 21.
4) if a minor is drinking, their intent is normally to get drunk. It's just not worth it, and I don't want to help someone do that, regardless of age.
- 1. Because it's illegal. 2. Alcohol consumption should only be allowed to those who are responsible and mature enough to handle the effects of alcohol.
- 1. To purchase alcohol for minors is against the law.
- 18 is my personal drinking age. I don't go out and offer to buy alcohol for anybody. But if a fellow student came to me and asked, then I would say yes. I don't know why America has put an age on drinking. Throughout history, and even "developed" nations today, if you were/are able to have a family, work, PAY TAXES, vote, enroll for the selective service, and even GO TO WAR, then by god you are sure as shit able to drink a beer or two, or even 10 if you damn well please. People under 21 who want to drink are going to find ways to drink, why ruin their police record with MIC's or MIP's, oh that's right... MONEY!!! When the Prohibition Act was enacted in the early 1900's, do you think Americans stopped drinking, NO! Instead they had to deal with slimy gangsters, brothel bartenders, and backward hill-billies just to get a drink. And if they were caught, same thing, a profit was gained for the local/state/federal government. Should drinking and driving be illegal? HELL YES! Do people still do it? HELL YES! Will they continue to do it? HELL YES! You can still regulate and destroy a person for violating the DUI/DWI laws, but if an 18 year old wants to sit at home, or go with a few buddies to the backyard and throw some back, then they should be able to. THIS IS AMERICA!!! Land of the free??? Guess who has a drinking age set at 18 (and it's actually not enforced, as long as you're not a toddler)??? Russia and China! What type of government comes to mind when comparing the two... Communism! Yes, Russia is no longer the communist Soviet Union, but lets be real here. Anywho, as a leader of the FREE world, I believe that the American age group of 18-20 should be included with the drinking age of 21 and above.

They're not worth getting in trouble for!

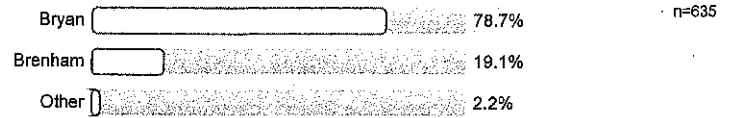

B/c im not risking myself for someone else's good time.
